Jon Perry is President of Sting Alarm, which he co-founded with his childhood friend, Jonathan Fine, in 2003.

“When we started Sting 21 years ago, Jonathan and I were new to the security industry and we quickly found out that a majority of our competition was utilizing technology from decades before,” explained Perry, whose expertise is in electronic security, specifically anything that goes on a network including cameras, video management systems, electronic access control, and intrusion alarm systems. “We have been able to expand Sting fairly quickly to a nationwide footprint because we have introduced our customers to the most cutting edge and innovative security programs and systems available in today’s market.”

Utilizing a forward-thinking philosophy of embracing technology, Perry and the Sting team are experts in the gaming surveillance arena with a number of customers utilizing their systems in Las Vegas casinos, California card houses and Native American casinos throughout the country. In addition to his leadership role at Sting, Perry is a founding member and Past-President of Nevada Security Association (NSA) board of directors. He is also frequently a featured speaker at security/surveillance conferences throughout the country due to his expertise in casino and nightclub environments.

Perry started his career as a field tech for Cyber Care Medical Solutions quickly moving up to the position of Director of IT for Creative Endeavors in 1997. He received his certification as a Microsoft certified systems engineer (MCSE). A Las Vegas native, Perry graduated from the University of Nevada, Las Vegas in 1998 with a Bachelor of Science in Business Administration with an emphasis in Management Information Systems.
