Prior to the passage of 2017 Wisconsin Act 211, the Department of Justice did not record expenditures in a way that allows for costs to be attributed to a specific case or law enforcement action.

The department is not able to capture all expenses associated with the seizure of individual assets. Specifically, the department's financial systems may not fully report all personnel work hours associated with seized property, and mileage, travel, and other direct expenses that are reasonably incurred as part of the costs of investigation and prosecution. Expenses are reported related to specific cases and not individual items of property.
